BELLEVUE HAPPENINGS

The junior choir, augmented by the primary part of the Sunday school, presented an all-musical service of praise, entitled "Wild Flowers." An enjoyable miscellaneous concert under the auspices of the choir was held in the auditorium of the United church. Following a lengthy programme, Mr. J. Longworth, junior, on behalf of the pupils of The Pass, presented Mrs. R. Upton with a beautiful yellow gold wrist watch as a memento of her stay in Bellevue. On behalf of the congregation, Mr. Chas. Emmerson then presented Mrs. Upton with a chest of silver. Mrs. Upton fittingly thanked the people for the two gifts received. Mr. and Mrs. Upton and their two daughters expect to leave early in July for the new home at Gleichen.

CRESTON DISTRICT

Italians loyal

Creston district Italians, at a mass meeting held in Creston last week, swore their allegiance to Canada, the King and the Empire.

Fifty-eight Italians elected Frank Celli president, Gene Sorrentino vice-president, and M. Amatto, secretary of the organization. All three were former residents of this district. The main address of the meeting was delivered by Mr. Sorrentino, who declared that "all Italians who, so ever hear tell or speak against King George and his Empire or friends, immediately report to the police, president or secretary of the meeting." All persons present were unanimous in approval of all motions passed. Mr. Sorrentino's speech was as follows:

Ladies and Gentlemen: "The reason of this meeting tonight is, as everyone of you possibly know, to pledge loyalty to the King and the country, which we live in, the same as thousands of other Italians in Canada, and all over the British Empire have already pledged.

"All of us left Italy years ago because of the adverse living conditions. We came to this country, and the people of this country gave us hospitality, and a chance to work and raise our families decently, but the dearest above all and everything else we have received from the people of Canada in Liberty and Freedom, and to live our own lives without any interference from the other people.

"The great majority of us have already decided definitely to establish ourselves in this country, and forget completely the origin and costumes of the country we came from. On making this decision, we have to thank the Canadian people for encouraging us, and making us feel that we are welcome to this country, and we will have the same freedom and privileges of the other people in Canada, and this encouragement and freedom should never be forgotten by anyone of us.

"The decision of the present Italian Government to associate itself with Hitler (a cold blooded murderer), is against the will of the majority of the Italian people, and his decision has already broken the hearts of many honest and good Italian workers all over the world. But, nothing we could do to prevent and stop his decision. But one thing we can do, and no one can stop us, is to condemn the decision of the present Italian Government to associate himself with Hitler, and pledge ourselves loyal to this country, and fight with the rest of the Canadian people, for our right, freedom and liberty.

"Personally myself, I do not know, if I should be any more proud to have fought the last war against the German army, because I feel that my sacrifice, like the other 4 million dead, and over one million mutilated and wounded has been in vain. But one thing I am sure, the blood of those martyrs which has been sacrificed for the independence of Italy, and for the freedom of the civilized world, will pay to save us from the arrogance and paganism.

"The mass murder of children and women in France, Belgium and many other countries, show you that the Dictators do not spare anything or anyone, as long as they obtain personal power.

"To finish my statement, I am asking all of you again, to pledge yourselves loyal to the country which gave us complete freedom and hospitality, and fight when our turn comes, for the dearest thing we have in our life, FREEDOM."

It was further moved that once a month a committee be appointed to canvass every Italian home for a collection in aid of the Red Cross.

M. Malitza, moved that the entire Italian population support the British Empire, one hundred per cent, and at all times remain loyal.

C.B.C. TO CELEBRATE

DOMINION DAY

As Canada celebrates her 73rd birthday, every citizen of the Dominion is working and hoping for victory. Through the breadth of the land, men and women of good cheer are taking strength from the pages of a young nation's history to make them equal to the tasks that lie ahead.

On Monday, July 1st, across the three and a half million square miles of the Dominion, along the 180,000 miles of inland waterways which bear Canada's cargoes, in the valleys, on the snow-capped mountains, and over the broad highways, people will pause to give thanks for this land.

In keeping with the deep significance of this Dominion Day, the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation will present to its listeners of the national network at 5.30 p.m. M.S.T. July 1st, a broadcast in tribute—"Our Home, Our Native Land." This will be the story in music and drama of Canada's past achievements, a statement of our heritage, and a mutual reminder of what we have to fight for, why we "Stand on Guard for Thee."

The broadcast will tell Canada's story, since Confederation, and before, in the simple, gallant saga of the common people, the individual citizens whose lives and work, whose faith and courage made the fibre of this nation. The dragmen of Stellar-ton, the heroes of the running trades, the homesteaders of the West, the trappers of the last frontiers, sailors on inland seas, lumberjacks, prospectors and men and women in the unheroic walks of life—all have contributed their share to the Canada of today, the Canada which every Canadian intends shall be a greater Canada tomorrow.

It would be of great interest to myself and I am sure, to many of your readers to know why, at this time of extreme peril to the British Empire, so many volunteers are turned down on account of their teeth. I personally know of cases of men who pass every other test—eyesight, hearing, heart and lungs—and are told to go home and get their teeth fixed and come back and they will be accepted. They simply cannot afford to do this, and if willing to serve should not be expected to. The cost of material in supplying false teeth is little, and the expert work in the army is provided by the government: then why should these gallant boys be turned down?—H. Meeres, Concord, Alberta.

The Foe Within

Out of this wrack of chaos and confusion which people are calling World War No. 2 will eventually emerge new ways of life, new attitudes between nations and individuals, great changes in government, new methods of approaching social and economic problems and in fine, the reconstruction of the world on an entirely different basis to that we have hitherto known and experienced.

And what is this new world which we dimly divine is coming after this maelstrom of conflict has ceased going to be? Is it going to be something better than we have dreamed, or is it going to be something infinitely worse than we could fear?

Are hate and greed, fear and malice and all uncharitableness between nations and among individuals going to be buried so deep that they will never be resurrected? Are these forces of evil going to be replaced by peace, amity, security, humanity and the love which so often we have glibly declared should comprise the cornerstones of relationships between man and man and between nation and nation, or is the world to be given over to an unbridled reign of fear, lust, cruelty, despotism and slavery?

In other words, are the forces of horror and evil against which we, along with those who think with us, going to be allowed to prevail, or are we going to gird our loins with determination to conquer, no matter how long and bitter the conflict, no matter how much we may have to suffer and endure in the meantime, and without regard to the cost to each of us as individuals and to the nation as a whole?

The answer to these questions is simple. It lies within the heart and mind of each of us as individuals and as members of the Canadian nation. Along with our Allies we can and will prevail, provided our attitude as individuals towards this gigantic struggle is the right one; provided that all of us are determined to wage this warfare to a finish and provided that each and every one of us dedicates himself and herself to the task in hand with the last ounce of physical ability and will power. And make no mistake, it may well be that these last ounces of reserves may have to be called upon to turn the scales in our direction.

Outcome Is Certain

And what is the attitude which we must bring to bear on our activities and contributions towards this tremendous struggle? Is it not true, that if we are to win this war and be in a position subsequently to say in what kind of a world we are going to live and have our being, that our strength of arms must be fortified by high moral purposes; that we ourselves as individuals must be imbued with those principles which we hope to be able to impose upon a willing world once the peace is signed; that we must practice these principles in our dealings one with another, that we must utilize them as guiding lights in the conduct of the war and that when victory has crowned our forces, as it will, we must make practical application of them when dictating the terms of peace?

As Canadians and as members of the great British Empire, we have everything, material and spiritual, to ensure an ultimate victory. If we make full use of these resources. We have courage, initiative, a bountiful supply of material resources and a high moral purpose, all of which must be made to play their part in full, not only by the nation as an entity but by every individual. If this is done there can be no question of the ultimate outcome.

A Foe To Fight

Since the outbreak of hostilities there have been dark days and dark months. There may be more of them before arms can be stacked and swords turned back to plowshares. Occasionally during the dark days through which we have already passed, there have been signs of a spirit of defeatism abroad, here and there. This is one of the foes which has to be fought if we are to expect our arms to be crowned with the success which we have every right to expect.

Defeatism is the very antithesis of the courage and optimism which enabled our fathers and our grandfathers to lay the foundations of a young but mighty nation, which enabled them to carve a great and promising civilization of the highest type out of the wilderness. If we are to be worthy of the heritage they gave us we must abandon the spirit of defeatism and spurn it every time it rears its ugly head, lest the enemy within our gates prevent us from putting to rout the foe outside.

Sometimes Favorable

"Out in Australia, where I live," said the lecturer, "neighbors are sometimes as much as 20 miles apart."

"It must be lonesome," remarked a listener.

"It has its compensations," continued the lecturer. "For instance, when one purchases a lawnmower it practically becomes one's own property."

Strategy Is Good Weapon

History Shows Victory Is Not Always Decided By Numbers

In the battle of Bannockburn, fought June 24, 1314, 30,000 Scots under Robert Bruce inflicted a crushing defeat on 100,000 English under Edward II. The victory was largely due to Bruce's undermining the front of his position with pits covered with turf and rushes into which the English cavalry were precipitated in helpless confusion.

Furthermore, the story of Bannockburn is but one of many proofs to be found in history that victory is not always decided by numbers. Strategy, tactics and originality can be as effectively applied to-day as at any time.

Even as in the days of Robert Bruce the commanders who can think best and proceed boldly to carry out their plans will prove successful and may still use $5,000 to defeat 100,000.—Fort Arthur News-Chronicle.

His Qualifications

Wishing to enrol as a cadet, an African sent the following letter to the British commandant at Lagos, Nigeria: "I am a shorthandist. Guns sneezing, bombs hailing and shells cricketing stand me no menace for I know my mortality. Let me come now to avoid rawness, brownness and untold inconveniences that may ensue from ignorance in the use and avoidance of arms."

A curve-ball baseball pitcher is less effective in Denver than in San Diego, because there is less air resistance in Denver, due to the high altitude.

Hate Everything Decent

Real Reason Nazis Want To Crush The British Empire

The following article by Erika Broder, appeared in the Toronto Globe and Mail:

"He hated me just because I was a gentleman"—you'll find that truth in one of Kenneth Grahame's delightful books. It is a fact that has been proved time and again in private life and we are inclined to believe that the senseless hate of certain other countries for Great Britain is based, chiefly, on this knowledge that there are things to which the British have never stooped. It must not be forgotten that it was the German mercenaries in the British Army which perpetrated the atrocities in Ireland a century or so ago.

England has left undone much she should have done, but one thing she is, and that is a city of refuge for the hunted, safe harborage for those driven by the terror raging in their own country, the place to which the fearful have fled, the little island that has even now, in the midst of its own alarms, sent out a warship to bring to its shores a woman who has resigned in simplicity and with justice, a woman whom all the world has respected, but who was attacked in her own home by "the barbarians from across the Rhine." The quotation is not from a recent writer, but from some one writing 2,000 years ago, from the country whose athletic dictator is to-day consorting with those barbarians.

These tyrants have hated Britain's individual and collective good breeding even more than they have hated her navy; they hated the English Princess, married to their Crown Prince, because she broke some silly rules of etiquette which they, because unsure of themselves, had built about their court. The Kaiser feared his grandmother, the great Queen Victoria, he hated Edward, her son, for the very qualities in which he himself was lacking, and his minions did their best to bring down the beloved George the Fifth, because the quiet dignity and simplicity of the nephew made the uncle's bluster and display of pomp look cheap and vulgar.

The barbarians from across the Rhine" hate Britain because her actions are based on an innate gentlemanly decency.

Has Nothing In Reserve

Mussolini Is Very Foolishly Prepared For A Long Struggle

Benito Mussolini's vile treachery will brand him forever in history. Adolf Hitler is a megalomaniac, but at least it can be told of him that, despite all the evil he has wrought, he has the sincerity of fanaticism. Benito Mussolini is no fanatic. He is a cold-blooded, calculating gangster seeking to snatch dividends from civilization's misery. In Paris to-day lives an old man, Marcel Cachin, who was the French Government emissary to carry gold to Benito Mussolini to buy his aid to bring Italy to the side of the Allies against Imperial Austria and Germany. From that day to this Benito Mussolini has been the purchasable gunman, the international Capone living off blackmail, a "Sawdust Caesar," trading in dishonor. Only two years have gone since this man entered into solemn agreement with Britain with respect to the Mediterranean.

Treachery will bring what it deserves. For all his bombast Benito Mussolini knows he has little with which to fight. A considerable part of his people are against him; his air force is largely obsolete and second class; his navy is definitely inferior to forces in the Mediterranean; his army has never been tested. Further: No belligerent in this war is less well prepared to stand a long struggle. Mussolini has neither coal nor steel nor oil; most of the war materials he must have be brought over seas on which he can't have mastery.—Ottawa Journal.

A Midget Car

An inventor in Italy has made a shrimp sized car which will do 450 miles on a gallon of gasoline. When the gas runs out it will go another seven miles on an emergency battery. And when the battery runs down he can use the pedals to make it go. Getting back to the pedal extremities, as it were.

No Luxuries

Women Of Britain Are Greatly Restricted In Their Purchases

British women are now required, in addition to other restrictions, to reduce expenditures on cosmetics, silk stockings, furs, permanent waves and also household equipment such as vacuum cleaners, etc. Such articles are declared to be luxuries in the Government's new order restricting imports. The war is also limiting color patterns for clothing. The range of dyes for women's clothing is limited to 12, and for men the choice is among a half dozen shades of brown, blues and greys.

This continent is not yet fully aware of the impact that the war is having on civilized standards of life. In the United Kingdom the shops are hand-bagged, holidays have been called off, and those who have been used to frills and finery are getting down to fundamentals. The principle not only of self-preservation, but of mutual aid is operating.

Selfishness becomes a form of treachery, and narrow individualism its outlook is intolerable. Personal adornment is a secondary interest, and hard work to provide safety, comfort and relief from suffering, is the ideal. These are great virtues to achieve, though it is regrettable that they are being won with so much hardship and tragedy.—Toronto Star.

Aboard A Destroyer

Ships Toss So Much That Meals Cannot Be Prepared

Meals may be irregular aboard a destroyer on the Atlantic patrol but it is not because sea-hardened sailors lose their appetites from sickness. It is because the ship tosses so much the meals cannot be cooked.

So says Commodore George C. Jones, Senior Officer afloat of the Royal Canadian Navy, according to a statement issued by the Public Information Office. He has just been promoted from Captain.

Christmas Day, 1939, for instance, found Canadian destroyers on towing seas conveying Canadian troops across the Atlantic. Commodore Jones had to make two cups of beef tea for breakfast, dinner and supper for 48 hours.

Nearly the Canadian soldiers travelled in the comfort of large passenger liners. They could eat if they felt like it but Commodore Jones doubts if they did.

Under such conditions a message of Merry Christmas signalled by the French battleship Dunkerque, passing on convoy duty, brought an ironical smile to the faces of hungry and weary Canadian sailors.

Look Forward—Canada!

Under this heading there recently appeared large advertisements of a Wall Board Company calling attention to several interesting facts—such as follows:

"This year you can have a far better home, for less money, than you could ten years ago."

Every dollar spent in remodeling—re-plastering—re-roofing and building creates an hour's work for one of the 200,000 men who depend on the building industry for livelihood.

In January, February and March of this year United States figures released the sale in building all over Canada is 15% but many times that in building of private, single dwelling houses. Loans granted under the National Housing Act increased 145% in February 1940 over February 1939. With this evidence, it seems that 1940 should be an outstanding year for building trades and those who supply them with materials—especially as there are many more marriages taking place, with consequent need of more new homes than for many years."

MOBILIZATION BILL IS ADOPTED AND BECOMES LAW

Ottawa.—The government's mobilization bill, having received third reading in the House of Commons, was given similar treatment in the senate and, with royal assent by Canada's new governor-general, the Earl of Athlone, will become law.

Adoption of the measure in the senate came without a vote after Hon. Raoul Dandurand, government leader, had been questioned on steps to be taken by the government under authority given it in the bill to compel all persons to place themselves, their services and their property at the disposal of His Majesty.

Compulsory service applies only in Canada and, while the air minister, Hon. C. G. Power, in the commons, has said all able-bodied men up to the age of 45 will have the opportunity and obligation to join the militia services, the government's plans under the act remain to be disclosed.

Sensor Melgheun, Conservative leader, said he would support the measure although it was unprecedented in that it gave the government powers that should be reserved for parliament.

At Senator Dandurand's request the bill was given first, second and third reading without the usual formality of going into committee for consideration clause by clause after second reading.

In reply to questions Senator Dandurand gave the same explanations made earlier by Prime Minister Mackenzie King in the commons, that regulations and orders to be issued under authority of the bill would be enacted as and when the situation demanded and that details of the government's plans could be disclosed at the present.

In the commons, where the bill had been in committee of the whole house, Mr. King steadfastly refused to make any promises in order to gain opposition support.

He had been pressed to amend the bill to place conscription of material resources ahead of conscription for home defence, to amend it so that financing of the war would be a responsibility of the Bank of Canada, and to provide that parliament might not recess longer than 90 days.

Principle of the measure, which empowers the government to require "all persons to place themselves, their services and their property at the disposal of His Majesty" if the need arises, was accepted by all parties when the bill was introduced. Compulsory service would, however, be only within Canada.

The prime minister personally conducted the government's argument against repeated efforts of Conservative, C.C.F. and New Democracy groups to qualify the powers to be conferred upon the administration.

New Ruling On Passports

Applies To Travel On Established Railway, Bus And Plane Systems

Ottawa.—Canadians travelling on established transportation systems from Canada through the United States to other parts of Canada do not require passports, United States legation officials said.

This applies to established railway, bus and airplane systems. If a Canadian is driving his own car a passport is necessary. The regulation requiring Canadian travelling in the United States to have passports becomes effective July 1.

Would Register Trucks

Edmonton.—Designed to provide a rapid motor transit for any wartime emergency, a scheme for registering every truck and truck driver possible in Edmonton has been approved by the ex-servicemen's war effort committee here. The scheme was proposed by Ald. D. A. Groat and he was instructed to start registration immediately.

Will Need All Farm Produce

Ottawa.—If Canada is to do all that is expected of it, its farms will have to produce all they are capable of producing, Prime Minister King said in the House of Commons. He was explaining that there was no intention of shifting large numbers of men from present duties to new tasks.

Records Moved Again

Geneva.—Valuable records of the League of Nations, sent to Vichy, France, in May for safekeeping, have been returned to the league's palaces. The documents had been sent to Vichy as the first step toward moving the whole league to Vichy in event Switzerland were invaded.

Prepare For Invasion

Britain Gives Instructions To Civilian Population

Ottawa.—Detailed instructions as to what to do in event of invasion were issued to the civilian population.

The instructions, in a sentence said: "What ever happens stay put." The booklet warned against fifth column activities and added: "Don't give any German anything; don't tell him anything. Hide your food and bicycles, hide your maps. See that the enemy gets no petrol. If you have a car or motorcycle put it out of action when not in use."

Civilians were urged not to believe rumors and to make sure that the orders they receive have not been faked.

The time may come, it said, when civilians will receive orders to block roads and streets to prevent the enemy from advancing.

"But," it added, "do not block roads until ordered to do so by the military or local defense authorities."

The ministry of information also announced seven rules for the guidance of the populace "if an invader comes."

1. Whether the invader comes by parachute, airplane or ship, you must remain where you are.

2. Do not believe rumors and do not spread them. When you must receive an order make sure it is authentic.

3. If you see anything suspicious note it carefully and go at once to the nearest policeman or military officer.

4. If parachute land near your home they will not be feeling at all brave. Do not give any German anything. See that the enemy gets no petrol.

5. Be ready to help the military in any way but do not block roads until ordered to do so by the military or local defence volunteer authorities.

6. Factory managers and workmen should organize some system now by which a sudden attack could be resisted.

7. Think before you act. But think always of your country before you think of yourself.

Defence Proposals

Britain May Establish Ministry To Deal With Fifth Column Elements

London.—Fifty members of parliament, meeting in the House of Commons, passed a series of resolutions urging arming of local defence organizations, and steps to establish a ministry to deal with fifth column elements.

The resolutions will be submitted to Prime Minister Churchill.

The program embraces: Shifting all land defence to the war office.

Division of the entire population into armed forces and others, subdivided into producing groups, who would be kept at regular jobs, and non-producers, who would be subject to immediate call-up.

Shifting of "non-effectives" to the dominions or American countries.

A nation-wide system of local defence organizations, provided with sub-machine guns, grenades, and other weapons.

Compulsory evacuation "as military requirements dictate."

Controlled By Government

Ottawa.—The large enterprises of James Franceschini, Toronto contractor taken into custody after Italy entered the war, have been taken over by the Dominion government. These enterprises include the Dufferin Shipbuilding Company, of Toronto, which has been working on warships for the government, and the Dufferin Construction Company.

Need Air Engineers

Ottawa.—The 23 amateur flying club preparing to operate elementary flying training schools under the British commonwealth air training plan are in urgent need of air engineers for maintenance of aircraft, the Canadian Flying Clubs' Association announced.

Quite The Contrary

New York.—Adolf Hitler has said he has no intention of invading the western hemisphere, therefore it can be regarded "as being the most certain truth that he has such an intention," Vincent Sheehan, American author now living in London, told the United States in a broadcast.

Open For Traffic

Ottawa.—Tourist demand for permission to use the new Banff-Jasper highway, which connects Canada's two largest national parks, has been so great that the highway was unofficially opened June 15.

Canadians In Iceland

First Contingent Will Soon Be Followed By Other Units

Ottawa.—The Canadian troops sent to Iceland, Newfoundland and the British West Indies were all dispatched from Canada, it was learned from a reliable source.

Prime Minister King announced that the first contingent of a Canadian force had reached Iceland and that further units will follow shortly. He also said Canadian troops were in Newfoundland. The transfer of troops to the British West Indies was announced recently.

The 1st Canadian division and its auxiliary forces remain in England where they are assigned to home defence.

Latvians Killed In Riot

Civilians Protested Against Russian Troops Occupying City Of Riga

Tallinn, Estonia.—Scores of Latvian civilians were killed and wounded in the streets of Riga during angry demonstrations against Russian troops occupying the city. Reports of civil disorders reached Tallinn.

Latvian civilians are said to have paraded through the streets. They stoned shop windows and marched to the central police station. Then, it is said, Russian military officers ordered Latvian police to fire on the crowds.

FOOD SHORTAGE IS COMING STRAIN ON NAZI REGIME

London.—An authoritative statement amplified Prime Minister Churchill's remarks of coming strain on the Nazi regime—"with half of Europe writhing and starving under its heel."

The statement declared famine would come to European territory under Nazi acquisition because crop prospects are bad to moderate.

Wherever Germany has occupied a country there has been a food shortage because all available supplies have been seized to feed the German war machine, the statement said.

"It is not expected in Allied official circles that there will be any alarming food crisis in Germany this year, but a severe winter and poor harvest prospects have brought a breakdown very much nearer than at first was thought possible," the statement said.

Germany and the invaded countries import some food.

The statement said the Danish pig industry had been about wiped out and that at least a third of the cattle there would be slaughtered this summer.

The food situation is critical in Norway and Belgium and Italy's entrance into the war cannot help, the statement added, because the Italian standard of living has been deteriorating for 10 years and is lower today than Germany's.

Official circles in London said it was expected that in a few months appeals would be made to North and South America on behalf of the populations in the subjected countries as "a part of the Nazi plan to procure food on humanitarian grounds and to utilize it for maintaining the war machine."

German Prisoners

May Be Brought From England And Interned In Canada

Ottawa.—Canada is prepared to meet the wishes of the United Kingdom government and have enemy aliens and German prisoners now held in Great Britain moved to Canada, Prime Minister Mackenzie King announced in the House of Commons.

The internment operations branch here has been preparing for some time to receive these aliens and prisoners of war, it was learned.

They will be put in new internment camps and will be kept separate from internees taken into custody in Canada because the administration is somewhat different. Canadian troops will guard the internees from overseas.

The prime minister said the British government was anxious "that we should take first of all interned aliens, secondly that we should take German prisoners in Britain and thirdly that we should then consider the matter of evacuated children."

"The reasons they give in this connection are that the interned aliens in Great Britain may be in a position to help parachutists in the event of a bombardment of the British Isles which they are expecting hourly."

"They also feel that the German prisoners they have there require a great deal by way of protection and that the men protecting them should be available for the protection of the British Isles themselves."

"There is great congestion, because of the refugees which have been coming there and they feel it would be in the interest of safety and security in every way to have alien internees and German prisoners brought to this country and placed in different parts of the country under protection measures here."

The prime minister did not say when the movement of aliens and prisoners of war would start but the impression here is that it will start soon. At the present season they can be placed temporarily under canvas.

Americans Would Enlist

Vancouver.—More than 400 United States citizens, many of them experienced pilots, have applied at the Royal Canadian Air Force recruiting station here during the last few months, officials said. "We are taking their applications," said Lt.-Lt. R. R. Bawit.

Big Shell Plant

Now Under Construction And Will Employ 2,500 Men

Ottawa.—The munitions minister, Hon. C. D. Howe, announced that the $8,000,000 shell-filling plant being constructed in Canada in conjunction with the British government will employ some 2,500 men.

The plant is scheduled to come into production in about six months but every effort is being made to complete it in advance of the scheduled date, Mr. Howe said.

Construction work on the new explosive plant which was to have been erected jointly with the British and French governments has also begun. The work will be carried out by the British government at a cost of $12,000,000. It will employ 2,000 men and is expected to start production before the year end.

Ambulances For Britain

Planned To Ship More Than 100 To British Isles

Toronto.—Dr. Fred W. Routley, national commissioner of the Canadian Red Cross Society, said it is planned to ship more than 100 ambulances to the British Isles just as soon as transportation can be arranged. Blankets also will be sent.

The number of ambulances promised the British Red Cross by individuals, business firms and clubs throughout Canada has reached more than 130, and more than 58,000 blankets have been collected.

First shipment of blankets, intended for refugees and wounded soldiers, has gone overseas, Dr. Routley said, but due to the present indefinite status of France, shipments probably will be taken to England in future.

CREATE BOARD TO TAKE CARE OF CHILD MIGRATION

London.—Great Britain has created a "Children's Overseas Reception Board" to handle "balanced migration" of British children to overseas havens, including Canada.

Announcing establishment of the new organization in the House of Commons, Clement Attlee, lord privy seal, told the nation removal of part of Britain's child population is a "matter of the utmost urgency."

The board is headed by Geoffrey Shakespeare, parliamentary under-secretary for the dominions. It proposes to send—possibly as permanent residents—as many of Britain's 6,000,000 school-age youngsters as parents will part with for the sake of their present safety, as many as available ships can carry and overseas reception areas would be prepared to take.

Canada is said to be inquiring for 10,000, Australia for 5,000, New Zealand for 2,500 and South Africa for "several thousand."

United States requests have come from various unnamed associations eager to undertake placing of British refugees in children.

Premature estimates in the British press were that 200,000 children could be moved. Informed persons said it was not anticipated any such number could be transferred quickly in view of the war's demand on shipping.

Only children under 16 are eligible. If they belong to grant-aided schools their transportation will be free. Otherwise parents must pay a rate of about $60 to Canada or $80 to Australia. Once the children have arrived in reception areas their parents would contribute on the basis of ability to pay, or pay six shillings (about $1.20) weekly per child.

The phrase "balanced migration" is used because it is planned to select the children carefully—all must pass physical examinations—and place them with due consideration to standards of living, type of schools, climate of reception areas and so on. Each area would get a cross-section of British citizenship.

Clothes will be provided through money granted to the receiving districts of living, type of schools, climate of reception areas and so on. Each area would get a cross-section of British citizenship.

The chairman of the overseas reception board will be aided by an advisory council including Lord Snell, Mrs. J. Westwood, under-secretary for the dominions, Charles Ede, secretary of the board of education, and Florence Horsburgh, under-secretary to the ministry of health.

BRITAIN DIGS IN TO RESIST ANY ENEMY INVASION

London.—Great Britain dug in to resist the expected German invasion from any direction.

Believing that the main assault would come on the southeast coast, the home security ministry set up a restricted zone 20 miles deep along the coast there, and announced that any person in that zone was liable to questioning and must be able to explain his presence.

Other fronts were not overlooked and plans were made to meet every one of them separately or all of them together.

Military experts believed the Germans first might fight with a raid from Norway or an attack on Ireland, trying to divert the main British forces from the real scene of operations. The possibility of the Germans dropping parachute troops on Eire, accompanied by massive bombing attacks throughout the British Isles, to spread confusion while troops were landed on the English coast, was not overlooked.

If German troops reached the English coast it was believed their main thrusts would be southwest from Suffolk and Essex and northwest from Kent, in an attempt to sweep around London for a meeting in the Thames valley west of the capital.

A third blow, it was believed, would be aimed west from heart of the Midlands. Should the Germans effect a landing in Eire, it was said, these thrusts might be accompanied by one from the west, aimed at the industrial region of Liverpool and Manchester.

Safeguards were being taken against all these possibilities and plans also were made to arm a great force of "minute men" with sub-machine guns and hand grenades, to stand off invaders in isolated regions until troops could arrive, and to keep panic-stricken civilians from blocking the roads.

Herbert Morrison, minister of supply, has disclosed in commons that steps were taken to procure large quantities of "tommy guns" and small hand grenades from the United States for use against parachutists and tanks. These would be distributed to "minute men" in all parts of the country.

The ministry of home security has warned in its pamphlet, "Digging in on the roads if an invasion starts. He said the roads would be vital to troops movements and that measures had been taken to insure that they would be kept open.

Aircraft Production

Output In Britain Now In Excess Of Casualty List

London.—Great Britain has stepped up aircraft production to the point where production in every category exceeds the total casualty list. This has just been revealed by Lord Beaverbrook, minister for aircraft production.

"The available aircraft of every type are in use against the number of machines at the disposal of the air force when the battle began," the minister says. In addition, through production, repairs, and replenished stocks there is now on hand a very good surplus stock of engines.

Fear Bombings

Rome.—Italy ordered hospitals, churches, art museums, charitable institutions and historic monuments, such as the Colosseum in Rome, specially marked as protection against air bombardments. Rome already had been declared an open city to save it from attack. The marking is being reported to the British and French governments.

Foodstuffs Stored

London.—Britain has enough of the most essential foodstuffs to last "for weeks and weeks," even if nothing else came into the country, Food Minister Lord Woolton told the House of Lords. "Up and down the country, in places where we have kept secret, we have iron rations to be used only in great emergency," he added.

Must Sing National Anthem

Toronto.—The Ontario government by order-in-council made public has ruled that "God Save the King" must be sung at the opening or close of each day's classes in all public, high, vocational and continuation schools in the province.

Tibet now has the highest post office in the world, 15,000 feet above sea level.

CONTRASTS . . .

In Germany, when war broke out, there was not a British citizen outside a concentration camp. Those who were German by birth but British by marriage had to leave everything and get back to Britain. Italy gave more freedom until the last few weeks.

In Canada we have close to 700,000 Germans. Twenty years ago the number was just one-third of this. How or when the increase took place is apparently unknown. But the story is that the number has been increasing. In twelve years from 1926 to 1937 German immigrants totalled 88,000 and Italian over 14,000.

However, we mention these figures to show the contrast between Germany and Canada. Here there is freedom, liberty and peace. We have allowed Germans to speak their own language at home or in public places. They have not been interfered with in their business, they could go anywhere throughout Canada without passport or police surveillance. Similar conditions apply to all nationalities, but nevertheless the people of Canada fear that the fact that we are so generous has inclined many to think there is a soft streak in us.

We have given citizenship too easily, we make too few demands for such an honor and, strange to say, you cannot take one's naturalization away for an offence no matter how serious.

When we consider subversive movements, we should remember that Canada has cause to be blamed for her lack of strictness. The laws are not stringent enough and should be altered.—Stavely Advertiser.

The Catholic Women's League of Canada voted $25,000 to the Dominion government to be used for war work in any form the government may decide.

Recruiting is proceeding steadily at the Lethbridge armories under Capt. C. G. Davidson, and a large number of young men have presented themselves for training. Most are joining the South Alberta Regiment and the Calgary Highlanders. Recruiting took place in Blairmore yesterday, when quite a number signed up.

Salvation Army equipment worth $200,000 was lost in the retreat of the Allied armies in Flanders. About seventeen canteen centres were destroyed or abandoned.

The Sunday school of Central United church will hold their annual picnic on Wednesday, July 3rd, at Crow's Nest Lake. The young people will meet at the church at 1 p.m., where transportation will be provided for them. Members and friends of the congregation are invited to spend the day with the children.

One of our well-known citizens walked into a local restaurant a few days ago, and when he got seated at the table with his friend from Calgary, the waitress said: "Are you a brother of Tom Hamilton?" "No," said our friend. "Well, do you know Tom Hamilton?" she asked. "Sure," he replied. But the waitress didn't catch on—Tom had sprouted a William Powell mustache!—Drumheller Mail.

NEWS FROM EDMONTON

(T. B. Windsor)

Edmonton, June 24.—Independent members of the Alberta legislature held a meeting in Edmonton on Saturday and drafted a letter to Premier Aberhart's government disapproving of an order-in-council, passed in April, which ordered that no session of the legislature should be held before February 6, 1941. The letter from the independent group declared that in view of the developments in the war in Europe, the people should know what the Aberhart government is doing to help forward Canada's war effort. Members of the legislature, it stated, should not be dependent only on press reports for knowledge of what the government's war plans and efforts are.

The meeting demanded that the premier should call a session of the legislature immediately to lay before the people's representatives its war-time plans. The members also pointed out that matters of the greatest importance connected with the reports of the Rowell commission into Dominion-Provincial relations, and the McGillivray oil commission, should be laid before the legislature at an early date.

The increasing tempo of war in the Mediterranean, with resultant greater demands for oil for Britain's armed forces, combining with increasing threats to continued supplies from the Near East, held attention last week on Turner Valley's possible contribution of the vital oil supplies to Britain's ultimate victory against the forces of dictatorship.

Close attention was being given in important quarters to Premier Aberhart's course of action in flouting the findings of the royal commission which studied the oil industry in Turner Valley—the findings and the recommendations of the commission which Premier Aberhart himself had appointed.

The commission having found, on the basis of evidence presented by the government's own witnesses, that "prices are not out of line, cost of performance is reasonable and prices are not excessive" in the Alberta oil industry, the provincial premier contradicted the decisions of experts, and ignored proved facts by calling for a reduction in the price of gasoline.

"There is not the slightest occasion," the report of the commission said, "for the government to exercise government control for protection of the public. On the contrary, it would seem that the public in Alberta is adequately protected by the play of contending forces prompted by desire for gain."

Yet Premier Aberhart indicated that he intends to start price-fixing—the policy which he has condemned before when related to private business.

"This is not the time," commented the Calgary Herald, "for the premier of this province or his henchmen to interject theoretical obstructionist tactics which may clog the wheels of industry, and particularly of such a vital industry to the nation."

In other parts of Canada, meantime, the price-fixing policy indicated by the governments of Alberta and British Columbia drew comments showing signs of consideration of a trade war within the Dominion.

"How would B.C. like it if Manitoba considered it necessary to fix the price of lumber, or apples, or canned salmon?" asked the Winnipeg Free Press. "What would Alberta think if Manitoba set the price of bituminous coal at a somewhat lower price?"

The peril to all Alberta primary industries in such a price-fixing policy was frightening.

The commission, after condemning the proposal of a government board with mandatory powers to control the industry, remarked in its report that it might be opposed in taking that position, because "there are many people who are given to adverse criticism and loose talk about the petroleum industry largely because in its membership there are to be found

NINETY, BUT STILL ACTIVE

The following is clipped from the June 24 issue of the Moncton (New Brunswick) Transcript:

Hampton, June 5.—Active physically and keen and alert mentally, Jacob S. Clark, who on Friday celebrated his 90th birthday, today recalled his early days in Richibucto, when his schoolmates included Andrew Bonar Law, afterwards to become prime minister of Great Britain; H. A. Powell, who became a member of parliament and later chairman of the International Joint Commission; Bob and Jack MacLaren, elder brothers of the recently retired lieutenant-governor, and others who in manhood won prominence in various fields.

Born in Richibucto in 1850, a descendant of Scottish settlers who came in large numbers to the North Shore in 1818 and 1819, he attended school at Rexton. "That was before the days of free schools," said Mr. Clark, "and our parents had to pay for our tuition. We had good teachers, and the soundness of the education given is shown by the progress made in later years by some of the pupils of those days." Most of his schoolmates have died before this, but in other years he followed with keen interest and pride the achievement of some of the brilliant men who had been pupils in the little school at Rexton.

When he was 16, Mr. Clark went to Saint John and became an apprentice with the Saint John Globe, advancing to the post of foreman of the composing room, which he held for many years before, after 57 years service with the paper, he retired 25 years ago and moved to Hampton.

His first day on the Globe was made memorable to the story of the assassination of D'Arcy McGee, a member of the first Dominion cabinet after confederation, who was shot by a member of the Fenian Brotherhood. Ten years later, when the Great Fire of Saint John occurred, he worked in the plant until the press run was almost completed before the men were driven out by the flames. They resumed publication the next day in a job printing plant without missing an issue. At a later period, a court reporter on The Globe was a son of his former Presbyterian minister in Rexton, a young man in whom, because of that connection, he took much interest. The young man was Mack Aitken, now Lord Beaverbrook.

"I've always tried to keep on the sunny side of life, without worrying," said Mr. Clark in explanation of his long life and continued health within ten years of the century mark.

Mr. J. J. Murray, retired C.P.R. agent at Frank, is a cousin of Mr. Clark.

Cliff Uphill, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Uphill, of Fernie, has volunteered for overseas service, and on Wednesday was in Blairmore shaking hands with his numerous friends and being bid farewell by his pals of the East Kootenay Power company construction crew now working in this district under foremanship of his brother Howard, of which he was a recent member, enroute east to join his unit at Petawawa. Mr. Thomas Uphill, and Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Uphill accompanied Cliff until he boarded the train at Hillcrest Station.

"It does not occur to such people that a corporation may be so large that quite aside from moral considerations it may not be the part of wisdom for it to be either extortionate or dishonest," the commission said. It also does not occur to such people that generally speaking the large corporation has the large volume of business, and so the low cost performance which permits of it most readily and effectively lowering prices to the general public. . . . The government should see to it, in the public interest, that prices do not become so low as to discourage the inflow of capital into the industry, or so low as to eliminate most competitors and bring about a state of monopoly.

INAUGURATE NEW SERVICE

The Greyhound Bus Lines inaugurated on June 10th a new service that will take the traveller over the new National Parks route on the way to the Pacific coast. This route will be over the Banff-Windermere highway, via Banff, Johnston Canyon, Marble Canyon, Radium Hot Springs, Kimberley and Cranbrook, to cross the border at Kingsgate and then on to Spokane, Seattle and Vancouver, B.C.

An alternate route is via the Crow's Nest Pass, over which the Greyhound service still operates.

The new service will open to the traveller by bus the incomparable scenic beauties of the Banff-Windermere route, with the additional advantages of passing through, or stopping over, if that is desired, at such noted resorts as Banff, Windermere, Fairmont Hot Springs, Radium Hot Springs and other scenic points in the mountains along the way.

As in all Greyhound trips, generous stopover privileges are available enroute.

From Radium Hot Springs the route to be traversed by means of the new Greyhound service goes along the east side of Windermere Lake. The scenic beauties of this place are only one of its attractions, for it is noted for bathing, boating, fishing, hunting or innumerable hikes, offering access to beauties of the mountain park and the Columbia valley.

Arriving at Fairmont Hot Springs, the bus traveller has access to this famous resort, which offers incomparable views of the valley and the lofty Rockies to the east. Fairmont is also endowed with natural hot springs, has a magnificent swimming pool and all available accommodations at hotels and camps.

Leaves Canada at Kingsgate, where the bus makes a brief stopover for customs inspection and proceeds on its way to Spokane.

MY TOWN IS MY TOWN

My town is a place where my home is situated; where my vote is cast; where my children are educated; where my life is chiefly lived. It is the home spot for me. My town has a right to my civic loyalty. It supports me and I must support it. My town wants my friendship, not partisanship; friendliness, not offishness; co-operation, not dissension; sympathy, not criticism; my intelligent support, not indifference. My town supplies me with law and order, trade, friends, education, morals, recreation and the rights of a freeborn citizen. I should believe in my town and work for it.

LIGHT THROUGH PRAYER

A cry goes forth to Source Divine
For help at this grave hour.

The cause of freedom must prevail,
Its flag remain unfurled;
Pride and dishonor doomed to fail
That seeks to rule the world.

'Tis not alone in armaments,
However great they be,
Nor skill that takes pre-eminence,
Insuring victory.

But with a humble faith in God
And trusting in His care,
A light will pierce the deepest gloom—
The light that comes through prayer.

WORLD HAPPENINGS BRIEFLY TOLD

Joseph G. Clark of Toronto has been appointed director of public relations for the air ministry. Air Minister Power announced the appointment.

New traffic light installation of 23 signal units at the bank in the heart of London is expected to do the work of nine traffic policemen.

An air raid siren has been installed in the steeple of St. Jean Baptiste church, approximately in the centre of Quebec city.

Elaborate plans to celebrate the official opening of the Jasper-Banff scenic highway have been cancelled by the federal government, according to word received from Ottawa.

Canadians travelling on established transportation systems from Canada through the United States to other parts of Canada do not require passports, United States legation officials said.

The house of representatives naval committee, acting with unprecedented speed, unanimously recommended a $4,000,000,000 expansion of the fleet designed to give the United States the world's greatest navy.

Britain's supplies of oil and gasoline are "very satisfactory," Geoffrey Lloyd, secretary for petroleum, told the House of Commons. There will be no reduction of the gasoline ration for civilians at present, he said.

Abuses of the privileges of internees' correspondents whereby friends and relatives in Canada may send letters to interned prisoners without paying postage has led to a cancellation of the postage privileges.

In view of the numerous offers of Canadians to lend money free of interest to help the country in the war effort, the government has authorized the issue of an initial block of $10,000,000 non-interest bearing certificates.

The Edmonton Grads

Canada's Wonder Basketball Team Decides To Retire

Undeclared champion of the world, Canada's wonder team—the Edmonton Commercial Grads basketball team—is through.

At a rousing reunion and banquet in Edmonton, the team which has travelled its unbeaten path for a quarter of a century, was an official final to its remarkable career.

The Alberta team set a record which has not been paralleled by any other organization in the world of sport. Since its organization among the graduates of the Edmonton Commercial High School away back in 1915 the organization has set the amazing record of having been defeated only 24 times in 25 years. It chalked up 530 victories.

During that time it has made a clean sweep of every woman's basketball title worth having—provincial, Dominion, North American and world championships. The girls won the Canadian championship every year they tried for it since 1922, the Underwood International Challenge Trophy since it was donated in 1923, the North American title from 1934 to 1936, the last year it was in competition, and the Olympic games series every time they entered.

Now they are retiring on their laurels. Lack of competition, lack of financial support for such a consistent winner, and added duties of their famous coach, J. Percy Page, as a member of the legislature, are the reasons.

The team has brought honor and distinction to its home town and to Alberta. If it had staged such an amazing career in any city south of the border it would have been publicized and feted to the skies. Even as it was, it forced its unparalleled record on the attention of Americans traditionally uninterested in anything outside their borders less remarkable than a quintuple birth or a ravaging dictator—Calgary Albertan.

Question Well Answered

And Members From Illinois Could Not Dispute Its Truth

Evidently the House of Representatives hasn't changed much in the last 80 years. It was in the 50's the House in session when Representative Hardin and others of the Illinois delegation began spluttering over the proper pronunciation of the name of their State. Some insisted it was "Illinoi"; others stoutly maintained that the "s" should be sound-ed.

Hardin finally appealed to the venerable John Quincy Adams who calling for order, said with a wry smile, "If one were to judge from the character of the representatives in this Congress from that State I should decide unhesitatingly that the proper pronunciation was 'All noise'."

I Read---And Write---For You

By JOHN G. KIRKWOOD

If the human brain continues to grow in size, men may come to have the bulbous-domed, small-faced, shag-headed heads that cartoonists ready draw for the man of the future. Thus declares Dr. Weidenreich, of Peking Union Medical College, China. This anthropologist says that human evolution since the beginning has been in the direction of producing a "brain man," and that further progress is likely to continue in the same direction. "Our senses," he says, "of seeing, hearing, feeling and smelling have suffered in intensity, while we substituted these deficiencies with a higher faculty of combination which took place in other sections of the brain. With the aid of tools and instruments invented by the brain power we have over-compensated all that we may have lost of the direct sharpness in sensory perception."

If any of us have funny faces, perhaps the reason is that we have a superior brain.

The educated man in this country is one who has acquired the skills—these: (1) ability to speak one's own language correctly and effectively in conversation; (2) ability to read one's own language with reasonable speed and comprehension; (3) ability to write clear and well-organized exposition; (4) ability to read a foreign language with facility; (5) ability to think clearly from a given set of facts; and (6) ability to work and live with other people.

selling sentiment; she writes the text which goes on greeting cards—for Christmas, birthdays, and other annual occasions. Miss Reubens has made an average of $3,700 per year for the past 15 years writing sentimental verses.

Miss Reubens sought a position in a stationary store—behind the greeting card counter—in order to get understanding of the greeting card market. She found (1) that nine out of ten buyers were of the working-class type; (2) that nearly all of them bought verse, and the same kind of verse; (3) that verses containing the words "worry," "dread," "trouble," "sadness," etc., remained unsold. She learned that in England alone there were sold every year between four and five million Christmas cards. So she concentrated on the working-class market, and her work began to sell—not because her poetry was good, but because it spoke a message of sincere sentiment, such as would be sent by a working girl to her sweetheart or special chum.

Seventy-two per cent of the earth's area has remained uninvestigated—so says a famous volcanologist—means that the ocean-covered area of our planet remains unexplored. "The earth is mostly unexplored," says Dr. Thomas N. Jagger, of the United States National Park Service at Hawaii. "Not a rock has been collected from 75% of its area. There are volcanoes of granite—old or young? Is not lava cooling forth? Is there coal or petroleum in the ocean bed? Are there precious fertilizers, metal ores, metallic laves, or strange bacteria?"

"There is 100 times as much volcanic action under the sea as above it," declares Dr. Jagger.

An Aid To Learning

College Professor Thinks Some Worry Is A Good Thing

People and monkeys worry too much, according to Dr. J. P. Fulton, professor of psychology at Yale University, who admits—guardedly—that "folks have to worry some or they'd never learn anything."

Since monkeys demonstrate worrying abilities, Dr. Fulton explained, they are used to experiment with the nature and results of worry.

"We have a chimpanzee that was taught something and later did it wrong," the psychologist recalled. "The chimp worried and fretted like a frustrated child. But after we removed its frontal lobe (portion of the brain) it didn't worry about anything."

Of course, he warned, people who didn't have a frontal lobe would go about touching hot stoves eternally, because that's the part of the brain associated with memory and the trial-and-error device.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

JONAH: THE OUTREACH OF GOD'S LOVE

Golden text: Salvation is of the Lord. Jonah 2:9.
Lesson: Jonah 3: 4.
Devotional reading: Psalm 67.

Explanations and Comments

Jonah's Disobedience, Chapters 1 and 2. The story runs as follows: The word of the Lord came to Jonah telling him that he ought to go to Nineveh, that great city, and preach there the message that God gave him. But Jonah shrank from going to a non-Jewish city.

Instead of obeying the voice, Jonah went in the opposite direction. At Joppa he found a ship bound for Tarshish (the Phoenician colony on the southern coast of Spain, then regarded as the very end of the earth), and went aboard it.

A violent storm arose; the sailors concluded that some one had offended his god, and they cast lots to discover the culprit. The lot fell upon Jonah, who acknowledged his guilt, and advised them to throw him into the sea. Finding the effort to row back to land unavailing, the sailors prayed to Jehovah, and then reluctantly cast Jonah overboard. The sea ceased from its raging, and the sailors offered sacrifice to Jehovah.

A great fish swallowed Jonah, and after three days cast him up on dry land.

Jonah's Tardy Obedience, Jonah 3: 1-4. A second time Jonah received the same commission, and this time he arose and went to Nineveh. Entering the city, Jonah proclaimed the message God had given him: "Yet forty days, and Nineveh shall be destroyed."

The Repentance and Pardon of the Ninevites, Jonah 3: 5-10. All the inhabitants of Nineveh believed that Jonah spoke the truth, believed that God would destroy their city. All fasted and wore sackcloth. The king's change from throne and royal attire to a seat in the ashes and a covering of sackcloth strikingly portrays the change from pride to penitence. God saw the repentance of Nineveh and "did not do the evil which he said he would do unto them." His purpose in sending Jonah was fulfilled.

Health LEAGUE OF CANADA

presents TOPICS OF VITAL INTEREST

By DR. J. W. S. MCCULLOUGH

HAY FEVER SUFFERERS

Thousands of Canadian citizens might look forward to the coming of summer with more joy than they do, if citizens residing near vacant lots would see to it that ragweed and other pollen bearing weeds thereon were destroyed before they had a chance to ripen.

Pointing to the fact that one person in every 100 in Canada has the United States suffers from hay-fever, according to an expert estimate, Dr. Gordon Bates, general director of the Health League of Canada, urged to-day that greater efforts be made to cope with this irritating plague, which annually makes the summer months a time of wretchedness for so many.

Because of its buoyancy, ragweed pollen is one of the chief distributors of hay fever, says Dr. Bates, and a wholesale destruction of such plants in and around the town would do much to make the air breathable for chronic sufferers.

However, ragweed is not the only hay fever producer. Some exceptionally sensitive noses will succumb to an attack after a visit to a flower field or merely as the result of close proximity to a bouquet of flowers.

These, fortunately, are exceptions, but many people are affected by the pollen of birch, willow, maple, aspen, poplar and other trees, and it is as well to find out to which of these one is allergic.

The Health League points out that scientific methods now are available by means of which any hay-fever patient may learn positively which pollen or dust it is that affects him. Vaccines then can prevent his falling victim when his particular foe appears.

Hay fever, in itself, is not a serious disease, but it may pave the way to asthmatic and other painful maladies. Dr. Bates explains in urging those who are subject to it to take early steps to avoid its recurrence.

Government Will Help Britons If Goods Destroyed By War

The British Government will give immediate advances to civilians whose furniture and clothing are destroyed by war action if their annual income is below £400 (about $1,280), Sir Kingsley Wood, Chancellor of the Exchequer, announced in the House of Commons.

The maximum advance will be £50 (about $160 for furniture and $30 (about $95) for clothing.

CHAPTER VIII.

"Could you please come and see me in the lunch hour?"

A.R.
Jim Carlton looked at the "A.R." blankly before he placed "A" as indicating Allen—he was under the impression that she spelt her name with an "E". It had been delivered at Scotland Yard by a messenger half an hour before he arrived. Later he was waiting on the mat when the girl came out, and she seemed especially glad to see him.

"You will probably be very angry that I've sent for you about such a little thing," she said, "and you're so busy."

"I won't tell you how I feel about it," he interrupted, "or you'll think I'm not sincere."

"You see, you are the only policeman I know, and I don't know you very well, but I thought you wouldn't mind. Mrs. Gibbins has disappeared; she didn't go home last night nor the night before."

"I'm thrilled," he said. "And her husband fears the worst?"

"She hasn't a husband; she's a widow. Her landlady came in to see me this morning; she's dreadfully upset."

"But who's Mrs. Gibbins?"

"This is where you're going to be very cross with me," she said with a half-smile. "Mrs. Gibbins was one of the charwomen at uncle's flat. Rather a wretched-looking lady with untidy hair. I'm rather worried about it because she's a woman without friends. I called up uncle's flat this morning and he was almost polite, and told me that she didn't arrive yesterday morning and she hasn't been there to-day."

"She may have met with an accident," was his natural suggestion. "I've telephoned to the big hospitals, but nothing has been heard of her. The workhouse told me the same story. I want you to tell me what I can do next. It's such a little matter that I'll listen mostly to my rude comment you care to think up!"

He was not interested in Mrs. Gibbins; the case of a lonely woman who disappears as from the face of the earth was so common a phenomenon in the life of any great city that he could hardly work up enthusiasm for the search. But Allen was so concerned that he would have been a brute to treat her request lightly, and after lunch, the day being his own, he went to Stanmore Rents in Lambeth, a little riverside slum, and made a few inquiries at first hand.

Mrs. Gibbins had lived there, the slatternly landlady told him, for five years. She was a good, sober, honest woman, never went out, had no friends, and subsisted on a pound a week which was paid to her quarterly by some distant relation. In fact, she was due to receive the money on the following Monday. Her chief virtue was that she paid her rent every Monday morning and gave no trouble.

"Do you mind if I search her room?"

The landlady wished that and showed him the way; it gave her a nice feeling of authority to be present during the operation.

Jim was shown into a small back room, scrupulously clean, with a bed and a sort of home-made hanging cupboard that had been fixed in one corner and was shrouded by a cheap curtain. Here was the meager wardrobe of the missing charwoman; a skirt or two, a light summer coat that had seen its brightest days, and a best hat. He tried the chest of drawers and found one drawer locked.

This he opened with the first key on his own bunch, to the awe and admiration of the landlady. Here was proof of the woman's affluence—a post-office banknote showing £25 to her credit, four new £1 Treasury notes, and a threadbare vanity bag with a broken chain. Inside this were one or two pitiable proofs of the vanity of the eternal feminine—a green powder puff, a cheap triclot or two, and between lining and outer cover a rolled paper of some sort, which had not got there by accident, he saw, when he carried the bag to the light, for it was carefully sewn into the lining. He took out his pocket knife, and, picking the stitches, extracted what he thought was one sheet of paper, lightly folded. When he opened the paper out he found there were two sheets.

The landlady ducked her head aside in an effort to catch a glimpse of the writing, but Jim was aware of this maneuver.

"Do you mind going downstairs," he asked politely, "and seeing if you can find in your ashen—"

"Dustbin," corrected the lady. "Whatever it is, the envelope of any letter addressed to Mrs. Gibbins?"

By the time she returned from her proffered task the papers had disappeared, and Jim Carlton was sitting on the narrow wooden ledge, a cigar between his teeth, and he was examining the threadbare carpet with such intensity that the landlady was certain that he had discovered some bloodstains.

"Oh!" He woke from his dream with a start. "You can't find it? I'm sorry. What was I asked you to get? Oh, yes, an envelope. Thank you, I found it in the bag."

He unlocked the drawer, and with anxious caution took the apartment came down the treacherous stairs.

"You don't think she's drowned herself, sir?" asked the landlady tremulously.

"No. Why? Did she ever threaten to commit suicide?"

"She's been pretty miserable for some time, poor dear!" The woman wiped a tear from her cheek, and the fascinated Jim observed that the spot where the apron had been rubbed was perfectly clean.

"No, I don't think she has committed suicide," he said. "She may turn up. If she does, will you send me a telegram?"

He scribbled his name and address on a blank that he found in his pocket and gave her the money for his dispatch.

"I know there's something wrong," insisted the fearful lady. "Foul play or something. She bought some stuff to make up into a dress; I've got it in my kitchen—it only came the night before last."

She showed him the package, which was unopened.

"My niece was coming in yesterday morning to tell her how to cut it out," continued the landlady. "But, of course, Mrs. Gibbins didn't come home, and my niece lives over in Peckham, and it's a long drag here."

"Yes, I suppose so," said Jim absently.

He walked down the noisome street, got into the little car that was waiting at the end, and went slowly back across Westminster Bridge to his room.

He was not in, and even if he had been, he was not in the mood for a consultation. He spread out on the table the papers he had taken from Mrs. Gibbins' bag and read them carefully, jotted down a few particulars, and refolding them, put them in his pocketbook. He passed the next hour in dictating letters to the last people in the world one would have imagined would be interested in the disappearance of a charwoman.

again that day, and was surprised, almost pleasantly, when he walked into the outer office and sent in his name. She was on the point of leaving, and the office boy, impatient to be gone, misinterpreted the color that came to her cheeks.

"You'll be getting me a very bad name, Mr. Carlton," she said as they went into the street together.

"Did I tell you that my front name was Jim, or James, as the case may be?" he asked. "Shall we try something more snappy in the restaurant line? I know a place in Soho."

"No, I think I'll go home now."

"I wanted to talk to you about Mrs. Gibbins," he said flippantly, though he was not feeling at all flippant. "And I have found out a few things I can be told there if I am wanted."

"Have you had any news?" she asked; and he guessed by her pensive tone that she had altogether forgotten the existence of the charwoman. At any rate, she did not demur when he handed her into the car and she accepted his restaurant, dingy though it was, without protest.

They were passing from the street when Jim heard his name called and looking round, saw a headquarters man.

"Come through just after you left, sir."

Jim read the hastily written phone message.

"I'll be back in an hour," he said, and followed the girl who was waiting for him in the vestibule.

When they were seated:

"I want to ask you, was Mrs. Gibbins in the flat that night your uncle's safe was burgled?"

She considered.

"No, she wasn't there; at least, she oughtn't to have been there. She came later, you remember. I opened the door to her."

"Oh!" he said again, and she smiled.

"What does 'Oh' mean?" and then quickly: "You don't think she was the burglar, do you?"

"No, I don't think that," he said; his tone was very grave—she wondered why. "Did she say anything about her; was she well educated?"

Allen shook her head.

"No, she was rather illiterate. I've had many of her notes, and they were scarcely decipherable. The spelling was—well, very original."

"Well, that's that!" he said at last. "I don't think that even your uncle, with his well-known passion for humanity, will so much as shed a silent tear. She was just nothing; nobody—a wisp of straw caught up in the wind and deposited God knows where! State fruit under the dustman's broom. Horrible, isn't it?"

Car Of The Future

Complete Change On Basic Design Is Predicted

When the horseless carriage streamlined itself into the sleek car of to-day, most of us assumed that at last we were riding in the automobile of the future. But David Bercroft of the aviation industry told the automotive engineers at White Sulphur Springs that we have reached only the end of the trial-error method. The car of the future will be the product of research in which every improvement of structure and material is dictated not by public taste but by laboratory test.

Mr. Bercroft predicts a complete change in basic design, developed from a rear-engine drive and a superstructure which is an integral part of the chassis. Engines in the rear are logical enough and have been tried in several models, without winning much popularity, but this arrangement has never lost its attraction for the engineer. If he can work it out, so much the better.

Present improvement is chiefly in the field of material. Cotton and rubber, Mr. Bercroft thinks are on the way out. Tires of the future will substitute synthetics for natural latex and rayon for cotton fabrics, though we may need a national reforestation program to do this. Better fuels and better engines will give the new car more even speed and manoeuvrability. Supercharging and synthetic rubber spring systems are just around the corner.

In a word, the car of to-morrow will do almost everything but fly. How to develop a car of super-drivers who know enough to stay on their own side of the road is the chief problem left unsolved.—New York Times.

Lexicon Of War

New Words Coined Since The Beginning Of Hostilities

The British Ministry of Information has added "chatterbug" to the lexicon of war words made popular in the last 12 months. A chatterbug discloses military intelligence by talking with unguarded tongue in public places or to persons who might pass secrets to enemy agents.

A parachute is one who reels parachuted. The word was coined when thousands in England volunteered to meet invaders from the skies. Stukas are dive-bombers, though once the term stood for "Kurtzschpambombers," the machine that went 400 miles an hour in its dive-bombing feats. Dive-bomber itself is a comparatively new word.

Panzer troops, according to Associated Press dispatches, are "armored" soldiers. Now the word describes all motorized fighting units.

These terms have temporary significance and may be as quickly forgotten as were "Jack Johnson" and "minnowwurger" after the last world conflict. But history will always cling to "writhe column" and a deathless feat of arms will doubtless for all time make the word "Dunkerk" stand for victory in defeat.—Vancouver Province.

Great Change In Method

More Miles Than Planes Were Used In The Last War

The New York Post says Department of Commerce figures, soon to be released, reflect the change in warfare, since the time when General Pershing headed the A.E.F. In 1918 the government shipped to the Allies $18,000,000 worth of miles, and less than $7,000,000 worth of planes. But in the six months from September to February we exported to the Allies, via Canada, only six miles—worth $150 and $61,200 worth of aircraft.

Some Trees Become Fears

In all the tree planting projects that are being carried out it is well to remember that there are weed trees that are to be avoided. Manjula maple and Carolina poplar make quicker growth than most other trees and will spread to fence corners and fields where they become pests.

This Makes News

Alice O'Shields of Spartanburg, North Carolina, had a slightly burned arm, but she was thankful to be alive and unharmed otherwise. A bolt of lightning ripped a newspaper from her hands as she sat reading it in her home.

Control Sale Of Arms

Ontario Considers Taking Steps In This Connection

The Ontario Government is considering controlling the sales of rifles and shotguns in sports goods shops throughout the province, Attorney-General Conant announced.

The question is being considered in connection with the supplying of firearms to volunteer civil guards. Mr. Conant said that jurisdiction in connection with the sale and disposition of firearms rests with the Federal Government, but the Ontario Government is considering the whole question of firearms in connection with shops which are selling rifles and shotguns without licenses.

Volunteer civil guards will be supplied with arms by the province.

Mr. Conant said it is contrary to law and public policy for any group organization or guard to carry arms except on authority of some competent jurisdiction. There are two jurisdictions. One is the Federal Government and that body can exercise the authority through the Royal Canadian Mounted Police and the militia.

The second jurisdiction is through the province. Consequently, Mr. Conant said, the volunteer civil guard—a separate body of the home guards sponsored by the Federal Government—would be armed by authority of the Attorney-General.

Forced Labor

Czechs Are Rounded Up By German Press Gang Methods

Czechs are being rounded up by "Press Gang" methods and put to work in Germany. Even highly skilled workers and engineers are among the enforced laborers who are sent to unknown destinations in Germany.

The calling up of these Czechs for the labor corps, says a report from Prague, is not done by decree but by the more effective method of a personal call by two Gestapo men on the recruit selected.

Gift From A Pilot

An airplane capable of carrying six passengers and a pilot, in addition to light bombs, was donated to the French government by Harry Hammill, former British war pilot and now manager of the municipal airport at Austin, Texas. The plane has a cruising speed of 182 miles an hour, and has been turned over to the French.

Yet sunsets, flowers and birds would be more appreciated than any stage show if we had to pay to see them.

THE BIBLE

The Bible is the only source of all Christian truth—the only rule for the Christian life—the only book that unfolds to us the realities of eternity.—Sir Matthew Hale.

I know the Bible is inspired because it finds me at greater depths of my being than any other book.—Coleridge.

To say nothing of its holiness or authority, the Bible contains more specimens of genius and taste than any other volume in existence.—Landon.
